FRESHMEN LOSE TO CADET YEARLINGS SATURDAY 13-14

Maher's Kicking Gives Norwich Winning Point

RICH'S WORK IN LINE SPECTACULAR

Patch's Pass To Chipman Scores Touchdown

The Black Panther yearling cubs tasted defeat by the narrow margin of one point Saturday when the Norwich Freshmen succeeded in kicking the goal that gave them a thirteen to fourteen decision. The game was played in the forenoon prior to the U. V. M.—Norwich clash.

The spectacular work of Rich and the forward passing of Patch to Chipman were the features of the Middlebury team. For the Cadets, Maher, Buck and Garrity were doing the notable work.

In the first period, Rich, Middlebury left tackle, got in a piece of good work by recovering a blocked kick on his own forty yard line and running the remaining distance to the goal line. However, it was his failure after this touchdown to kick the goal that spelled defeat for his team.

In the second period, Patch threw a forward to Chipman who after cleverly evading the Cadet tacklers tore through for the Blue and White's second touchdown. This time Rich found himself and was able to successfully drop kick the extra point.

Shortly after that Garrity started things for Norwich by running fifty yards after plunging through the line on an off tackle play. He was tackled a few yards in front of the goal and Maher took it over. Maher also kicked the goal. In the third period, Buck circled left end and ran forty-five yards. He too was downed just in front of the goal. Maher again took the ball over and then kicked the extra point that gave his team the victory. On line bucks Maher starred for the Cadets, going through for long gains time and again.

BOSTON MAN TO SPEAK ON BANKING

Other Lecturers Include Prof. George P. Baker of Harvard

Mr. W. I. Bullard of Boston will give the second of the Vocational Lectures in the Chemistry Building at 8.15 p. m., Tuesday, November 20. His subject will be: "Banking Opportunities, Domestic and Foreign."

Mr. Bullard is Vice-President of the Merchants National Bank of Boston, Treasurer of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, Joint Treasurer of the World Cotton Conference, and a Director and Member of the Executive Committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

He is a prominent cotton manufacturer and banker, and has long been a student of world financial and business conditions. In 1921 he visited thirteen European countries to study the financial situation there and has more recently returned from a similar mission in South America.

Mr. Bullard is an ex-newspaper man and was at one time a member of the editorial staff of the "Wall Street Journal."

The hour for the lecture was advanced to 8.15 that there might be no conflict with the regular meeting of the Undergraduate Association scheduled for the same evening.

Definite dates have been arranged with other speakers for the course since the partial list was published two weeks ago. Professor George P. Baker of Harvard will speak on "Dramatics as a Field for College Graduates."

Mr. Stewart L. Mins of J. Walter Thompson Co. of New York will talk on "The Advertising Business."

Professor Jesse Williams of the Department of Physical Education of Columbia will lecture on "Opportunities

NORWICH CADETS TO CLASH WITH MIDD SATURDAY

Advance Dope Says Blue Will Win

SEVERAL OF VISITORS DISABLED

Papke And Brosowsky Middlebury's Loss

Tho defeated in the game that they wanted to win above all others, Captain Moynihan and his team are not down-hearted and are out to come right back with a win from Norwich in the closing game of the season. The two teams will clash on Porter Field, Saturday afternoon at 2.30 in the final game of the state championship series in order to determine who will be runner-up for the honors won by Vermont. Advance dope points to a win for Middlebury. Vermont had a fairly easy time winning over Norwich, 34-0,but had to fight all the way to defeat Middlebury 13-0.

Norwich is not reputed to be dangerous in the air and there is yet to be found a back who can puncture the Middlebury line successfully. However the Cadets have made a very commendable showing this year and may be able to throw a scare into the Black Panther eleven.

Papke was the only one of Coach Morey's men to be hurt seriously in the Vermont clash. He sustained an injury to his shoulder early in the game and was forced to retire in favor of Quackenbush. Brosowsky did not get into Monday's game at all and probably will not be able to get into the Norwich game. The rest of the team came through the Vermont game in good condition and will be ready to repeat the 21-0 victory which they gained last year over Norwich.

Norwich Suffers Many Injuries

Northfield, Vt., Nov. 11.—Norwich will face Middlebury on Porter Field next Saturday with several of her players out on account of injuries. Captain Bradley, the Cadets triple threat, is out with a wrenched knee.

BLUE ELEVEN GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT BEFORE VERMONT'S PERFECTED AERIAL ATTACK ON CENTENNIAL FIELD MONDAY

Unerring Passes Of Gooch, Playing With Injured Ankle, Gives Green And Gold State Title

BLUE EXCELS IN LINE BUCKING

'Varsity Defense Superb When Vermont Threatened To Smash Thru For Touchdown

Middlebury's fighting eleven went down to defeat before the baffling attack of the University of Vermont by the score of 13-0, when the two ancient rivals met on Centennial field, Monday. The score tells quite accurately the story of the game. The overhead attack from Gooch to Semansky and Eastburn was the big factor of the game and was the thing which brought victory to Coach Keady's eleven. When it came to line rushes, it was a different story. The Middlebury backs were able to rush through the line much more consistently than their opponents. The Blue line showed its superior strength when it twice held for four downs within five yards of its own goal-posts. However Middlebury was never able to get dangerously near to the Vermont goal-line.

Although the Black Panther eleven broke up fifteen of the twenty-five passes hurled by Gooch, the ten that were completed were nearly all for substantial gains. Middlebury tried eight passes but only completed one, that for 20 yards. Each team intercepted two of the other side's passes. Middlebury made eight first downs while Vermont got nine. Coach Morey's backs made seven of their first downs by hitting the line and only one on a pass, while Keady's men made six on passes and only three through the line.

Whitney and Yarnell were nearly even in the punting game, both averaging a little over forty yards. However, Middlebury was able to run the punts back with more success than Vermont.

Late Publication Explained

A breakdown at the printing office caused an unavoidable delay in the publication of this issue of The Campus.

X-COUNTRY TEAM DEFEATS VERMONT

Cook, Hancock, And Robinson Finish First—Score 19-36

Middlebury Cross Country team concluded its third season Armistice Day, by swamping Vermont at Burlington, 19 to 36. Captain Cook resolutely led his men through the unexplored terror of mud, morrass and mountain; taking first place in 35 m. 48 s. and bringing to a glorious close a long and successful cross country career. The Blue and White captured three firsts: Cook, Hancock and Robinson; next Kelly and Fish who tied for fifth place; Kendall, sixth; while Hamlin and Lathrop finished barefoot, seventh and tenth respectively. The result is as follows

Cook, M; Hancock, M; Robinson, M; Salter, V; Kemp, V; Fish, M and Kelley, M. a tie; Kendall, M; Hamlin, M; Stone, V; Bouche, V; Lathrop, M; Summers, V.

English Club Holds First Regular Meeting

An informal discussion on the value of the study of English took place at the first regular meeting of the English Club this year in Hepburn Social Hall Thursday evening. Professors Cady and Perrin were present and made a few remarks along the same line.

A permanent program committee was elected, and will have whole charge of future meetings, some of which will be open to all.

To The Final Whistle

The result of Monday's battle royal naturally is not the best of news to Middlebury fans. No excuses are needed, however. Our upstate friends are good winners and we are trying to be good losers. The better team won, as the better team should win.

An outstanding feature of the day was the good spirit shown by both sides on the field and in the stands. It left nothing to be desired. It was the spirit of friendliness and good will, most pleasing when seen in rival schools.

The Gooch-Semansky passing combination proved to be one of no passing skill. The Green and Gold captain's speed coupled with Gooch's unerring throws were a combination hard to beat. Tho not gaining ground at quite the rate she did at Columbia, Middlebury was right there nevertheless with the old rugby tactics. And it was with great satisfaction that we saw Connie's men upholding right well their reputation of fighting thru to the final whistle.

Vulgar Reflections

It is perfectly natural to accept existing conditions and to call them good simply because they do exist and have existed for some time. This is no real justification, however, nor does it hold in science, where supposedly infallible principles and laws have been shaken to their very foundations by the induction of other principles which are backed by a greater weight of fact. "The world should not be presented to the student as happily standardized but as urgently demanding readjustment," says James Harvey Robinson, great exponent of intellectual progress.

The subject of coeducation at Middlebury is one which has rested in comparative peace for so long a time that it has become the accepted thing. The existence of both sexes in the same institution—for it is but one institution—creates a situation which intimately concerns our day-o-day habits and activities. It also has such a powerful bearing on the growth of the College, on athletics, on organizations, and above all on the general tone of the place, on l'esprit de corps, that its merits deserve our active consideration.

The separation of the sexes in the classroom has been decided to be advisable, and segregation in this respect, we are told, is being developed. This relieves a condition of unequal progress and tends to increase the efficiency of the professor's work. Socially, coeducation will still exist after classroom segregation is brought about, and the general opinion that in the social life of college the two groups have a good effect upon one another is questionable. It is axiomatic that a man can concentrate on but one thing at any given time. When his mind is occupied with thoughts of the other sex, it can hardly be grappling with bigger things. When social diversions grow to be paramount interests, they become a nuisance.

The atmosphere of our college community has a quality which is hardly definable but none the less sensed by an unprejudiced visitor. Is that atmosphere possessed of the wholesome femininity of an independent women's institution of learning, or is it loaded with the upstanding virility and spontaneity of a men's college? We submit that it is neither. It is a sort of compromised atmosphere, which impresses us now with the dominance of one set of characteristics, now with that of the other; and it is increasingly difficult to say which is the policy-determining partner of the firm.

To consider growth: the administration is like a farmer who owns two farms and who has only enough capital and equipment to run one of them adequately. He divides his capital, but finds that, after operating expenses are met, he has very little left for making permanent improvements or for increasing his holdings. Here is opportunity for thought and for constructive imagination.

The writer is still open to conviction, but wishes to point out that, from the standpoint of growth alone, the advisability of continuation of Middlebury's present policy of coeducation is a live question.

Sideline Snatches

Visitors sitting at the end of the field reported that the cheering and singing on the Middlebury side was louder and more hearty than that of the Green and Gold supporters.

M——M——M

Prexy proved himself to be a good cheerleader when between the halves of the game he came out before the stands and led the "No hope for Vermont' yell. Needless to say he got plenty of support.

M——M——M

By lying flat on the field far from the line of scrimmage, Semansky who was receiving the bulk of the Vermont forwards tried to escape the notice of the Middlebury team but the ever alert "Connie" soon spied him and thus eliminated any work of that kind.

M——M——M

The canine supporters of the University seemed quite in evidence Monday and when one big collie came over to inspect the ball prior to a kickoff, one Vermont player seemed quite disturbed.

M——M——M

Payne showed up well on the off tackle plays but Fritz Ehlert lived up to his name by crossing in from the line and tackling the Vermont back from behind before he crossed the line of scrimmage.

M——M——M

One of the most clever plays of the game was the concealed punt used twice by Whitney. The Vermont defence was drawn well in and the punt went way beyond their reach.

M——M——M

If Gooch could take care of someone else the way he cared for himself, he would make a pretty good nursemaid. When he received punts he signalled for a fair catch and then when he missed the ball he fell on it immediately without any attempt to run it back. Well, he appreciated the tackling power of the fleet Middlebury forwards.

M——M——M

Manfreda, the fast freshman from Rutland, showed lots of ability in hitting the line but he made a sorry mistake when he tried to go through Gus Mullen's side. He might as well have bucked a wall of steel.

M——M——M

In vain did the Green and Gold backs try to carry the ball over from Middlebury's three-yard line but three smashing attacks netted as many inches and they were forced to hand the ball to Captain "Connie."

M——M——M

During the halves of the game, we spied Prexy Plumley, Prexy Bailey and Prexy Moody having a pleasant chat on the side lines. Evidently a little thing like a football game did not arouse any antipathy among the respective heads of the colleges.

M——M——M

The respect and attention shown by both cheering sections and the readiness to cheer an injured opponent marked the fine spirit that has sometimes not been present in past U. V. M.-Middlebury contests. The supporters of the Blue and White appreciate the hospitality offered them while in Burlington.

M——M——M

President Moody led one Middlebury song, followed by a tremendous "Yay, Prexy!" I think the bunch sang a little worse for Paul D. than they did for their song leader, but it was great stuff.—Rutland Herald.

M——M——M

"Is that Middlebury's quartermaster that was just carried off?"—John Southwick of the Free Press.

M——M——M

Although our neighbors by the Lake can throw a football, they are not so apt in track athletics. In the forenoon, the Blue Harriers almost doubled their advantage by running up a 36 to 19 score.

THE SPORTING SPIRIT

The University of Cincinnati has substituted the following pledge for the usual advertisement on the back of its foot-ball schedule:

"In order that I may be a worthy representative of my University, I pledge myself to true sportsmanship on and off the athletic field. Especally will I endeavor to promote this spirit by securing proper respect for our guests on the part of the rooters and players in all events. Sportsmanship first—winning second."

This pledge seems to strike just the right note in that it recalls true sportsmanship to those who are likely to forget themselves in the heat of the contest.

There is no doubt that the lack of sportsmanship reflects upon a college. While it is true that there should be the same standards on and off the athletic field, their presence is most noticeable on the field. We know the temptation to make fun of an opponent, especially if one can find any little peculiarity about him. And we also know how far from sportsmanlike is such conduct.

The true sporting spirit never takes advantage nor slurs an opponent; it is always fair and square. Middlebury finds no pledge on the back of her foot-ball schedule, and we like to feel that it is not needed.

Plans were discussed to raise money for the Endowment pledges. For this purpose a Benefit Bridge will be held in Newark at an early date.

The officers of the Association for the ensuing year are Mrs. S. D. Harrison, President, Helen M. Carrigan, Secretary and Treasurer.

Student Government Delegates Are Chosen

Miss Edris Thayer, President of the Student Government Association, was unanimously chosen as a delegate to the Annual National Student Government Convention at a meeting of the Association last Wednesday afternoon in Old Chapel. Margaret Peck, secretary of the Association was also chosen to represent Middlebury at this convention. The Convention is to be held at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, from November 21 to 24.

At the same meeting Ruth Cowles was elected Chairman of the Red Cross Membership Campaign, which started yesterday and will continue during the week.

COMMUNICATION

W. H. Hill '09, Expresses Satisfaction In Showing Made Against Columbia

To The Campus:

Have just been reading the enclosed report of the game last Saturday, which is somewhat colored by local prejudice.

My conclusions, taking everything at face value, are that Middlebury outplayed Columbia. The fact that Jaeger did not "repeat" his whirlwind stunt, indicates that good luck in the "breaks" was more responsible than superiority.

For our little old Midd to show up so well against Percy Haughton's subjects is no cause of "humiliation" as expressed in one of the reports.

My hat is off to the team and the coach!

Sincerely,

W. H. Hill 09.

HOLD PATRIOTIC SERVICE SUNDAY

President Speaks — Legion Men Attend In Body

A patriotic service in honor of the World War veterans was held in Mead Chapel Sunday, President Paul D. Moody speaking. The American Legion men attended in a body. President Moody took as his text "To what purpose is this waste?" applying the question to the terrific waste during the world war of life, of service and of money.

"This thought," said President Moody, "came to us constantly, stabbing, clubbing, paralyzing us. To what purpose is this waste? Is it worth while? Are we here for any useful object? The answer to that query has not yet come. It remains for the men who are left to decide whether it was worth while."

He quoted Lincoln who had this same thought and gave expression to it in his Gettysburg address. 'Let us here highly resolve that these honored dead shall not have died in vain.'

"Those who did not have a chance to serve," continued the President, "now have the chance to show their patriotism, not in a spectacular way, but in a way just as fine and great." He then went on to enumerate the ways in which we can carry out this work: by thoroughly informing ourselves, by entering into the duties of citizenship, and by carrying on the ideals of a better world. Those who have discarded their uniforms may still have a heart of khaki. In conclusion he said, "We might well reverse the quotation 'I have a rendezvous with life', to 'I have a rendezvous with death', a thing often harder, in devoting ourselves to all that is best and highest in the life of our country."

Kappa Delta Rho Convention

R. M. Savage and W. E. Long left last night to attend the Convention of Kappa Delta Rho at Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana.

Miss Charlotte Moody, who is attending Radcliffe College this year, spent the week-end at Middlebury with her parents.

Miss Isabelle Marshall, who transferred to Wellesley Colege, was here for the U. V. M. game.

SYLVIA LENT PLAYS IN MEAD CHAPEL

Youthful Artist Displays Remarkable Technique And Feeling

By D. K. U.

Berlioz once said: "The violin is capable of a host of apparently inconsistent shades of expression. It possesses as a composite force, lightness and grace, accents both gloomy and gay, thought and passion. The only thing to know is how to make the violin speak." Sylvia Lent, little girl violinist, not only made the violin speak Friday night at the third concert of our musical season, but she made it sing as well. It spoke her thoughts, it sang her emotions. And above all, Miss Lent tosed off the most difficult of pieces as if they were trifles, simply and naturally as if she were breathing. She proved herself a finished artist.

Bruch's Concerto in G Minor, the opening number set a high tone for the performance. The Prelude established Miss Lent's mastery of technique, the Adagio, lovely, flowing, and with exquisite nuance proved her individuality of style and interpretation. Unfortunately the full effect of the Finale was lost through the blurring by the accompaniment.

Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso by Saint Saens opened with smooth velvet tones of the Introduction that shaded into the allegro of the rondo. The phrasing conscious and artistic, the theme was brought out with clarity and precision, and the high notes attained without the least faltering of tone. A notable thing of Miss Lent's playing was the ease and beauty with which she managed her high tones.

The third number, a collection by Gluck, Couperin, and Pugnanni, was all arranged by Kreisler. Melodie was played with gayety and youthful enthusiasm. Chanson Louis XIII Pavanne graceful and quaint, was a relief from modern music. Miss Lent's successful use of the vibrato should not pass unmentioned. One of the most difficult phases of violin technique is the use of the vibrato, which is so frequently ill used to attain superficial effects. The Pugnanni Prelude and Allegro was nothing short of tremendous. It was a triumph of technique, the mastery of the most difficult of passages, the vivid feeling and the delicacy of the closing tones.

Chopin's Nocturne in E flat was perfect. It might even be said to approach the Kreisler record. Three numbers by Cecil Burleigh, Fairy Sailing, Hills and Moto Perpetuo carried the audience. Hills was a poem. It was played with the touch and spirit of genius. The pizzicatto was effective in Cesar Cui's Orientale which was well played. The closing number Polonaise Brilliante in D Major was brilliantly developed to a striking climax. The accompaniment lagged behind and frequently hindered Miss Lent from gaining the richest effect. The audience so genuinely expressed their appreciation that no less than four encores were given. Schuman's Musbaum, Espagnola Serenade by Kreisler, the Bee by Schubert and Souvenir by Drdla. The harmoniques in the Bee can not be over-praised and the delightful rendering captured the audience.

In speaking to the writer Miss Lent expressed the same sentiment of every artist who has visited Middlebury this year. She remarked upon the beauty of the view from our Chapel which seems to appeal to so many artists. Miss Lent said also that she had never attended school. For the past six years she has studied with the famous Leopold Auer in New York and was in fact the first pupil of Auer's in America. Miss Lent is unaffected and charming in appearance and not the least spoiled by her early success.

1925 KALEIDOSCOPE TO HAVE ENLARGED ATHLETIC SECTION

Campus Views And Color Work To Feature

BOOK TO BE FIMISHED APRIL 1

Contracts Signed And Work Well Under Way

The plans for the 1925 Kaleidoscope are at length complete. The editorial staff has been delayed by publishing negotiations but now announces the probable date of appearance of the Junior yearbook as April 1st. As this Kaleidoscope is being issued by the 125th class of Middlebury College it will be in a sense an anniversary number. To that end many new and distinctive features will be embodied, while the whole organization will attempt to develop an atmosphere of true Middlebury spirit and tradition.

The book will be bound in a distinctive leather cover in color, with extra color work in the section plates. the front section will be devoted to full page campus views and portraits in canvas finish. Also much less space will be given to Fraternities and to individual sketches of Juniors. Doubtless the feature of greatest interest to the student body will be the greatly enlarged athletic section. This will contain several action pictures and individual photographs of the varsity players in addition to the usual contents.

The photographs are being done by White Studio of New York, the engraving by the Canton Engraving Co. of Canton, Ohio, the printing by the Free Press Printing Co., Burlington, Vt., and the cover by David J. Molloy Co., Chicago.

The Junior class expects and deserves the hearty cooperation of the entire college in putting across successfully the most ambitious literary venture on the campus.

BLOOMFIELD DEFINES NEW PROFESSION

Says College Men Needed To Handle Employment Problems

Personnel management and the new ideas in regard to employment in industries were the topics discussed by Mr. Meyer Bloomfield, industrial expert, before a large and interested audience Thursday evening in his lecture, "Some New Professions in Handling Men."

"A great change has taken place in the last decade, said Mr. Bloomfield, in ideas as to the employment and handling of men. Nowadays in hiring a man an industry or business considers itself as entering into a mutual partnership, of even more importance to the firm than to the employee. This idea has given rise to a new profession, the personnel management work.

"Personnel Management is divided into four fields: industrial, educational, medical and general service; all for the good of the employee. A personnel manager has charge of hiring men. He select the few best fitted from the many applicants. He has charge of all kinds of employee's enterprises. He must keep in touch at all times with the sources of labor. He must endeavor to readjust misfits, and prevent friction, dissatisfaction, and injustice.

"The qualities needed for success in this field are: sincerity, interest in human nature, education, culture, initiative, originality, patience, ability to do routine work, and a broad general insight.

"College men are in especial demand in this field," said Mr. Bloomfield, "for a general college education gives a sound basis of culture to build experience upon. The hope of any industry rests in trained and educated college men, for all professions of today are "gutter" jobs raised to their present standard by men of vision and education.

The salaries at present in this field range from $8,000 to $15,000 per year and the profession is bound to grow.

After the lecture Mr. Bloomfield held a short open forum.

Middlebury Goes Down To Defeat Against Old Rival

Gooch, limping with a bad ankle as a result of the Norwich game, usually fell on the punt instead of trying to run it back.

No Individual Star

There was no individual star. Quackenbush played a good game at quarter. Lobo proved to be Middlebury's most consistent ground gainer, making several long gains. Whitney played his usual hard game. The entire line following the example of Captain Moynihan at center was performing exceptionally well. Mullen and Ehlert excelled in tackling. Vermont's team was well- balanced. Payne, the speedy half back was the most consistent at gaining through the line. He starred with a nice 40-yard run. Gooch threw his passes with deadly accuracy and the ends and other members of the backfield divided among themselves the honors of receiving them, Semansky seeming to have an uncanny ability at getting under them.

The best that Middlebury could do was at the beginning of the game when they received the kickoff on the 30-yard line and by a series of rushes by Lobo, Whitney and Klevenow gained three first downs for forty-eight yards This brought the ball to the Vermont 22-yard line but it was finally lost on downs. Never again did Coach Morey's team threaten to score although they were able to make some nice gains in midfield. After trying unsuccessfully to get through the line, Yarnell punted. Middlebury gained ground by pulling a surprise punt and Vermont got the ball on her own 20-yard line. From here Vermont started to prove the fact that a good forward passing team is superior to a good team that can rush the ball.

Semansky Scores Touchdown

Gooch threw a fifteen yard pass to Tarpey who ran fifteen yards more before Quackenbush tackled him. Two short gains and a penalty made ten yards more. From the 40-yard line a pass to Yarnell made twelve yards. Gooch then heaved a long pass to Semansky who was entirely free and able to run for a touchdown. Gooch failed in his attempt to kick the extra point.

Vermont's other score came in the second quarter. After Middlebury had made two first downs she fumbled on her own 45-yard line. On four plays Vermont made fifteen yards and a first down. Then Gooch let loose his aerial attack again and threw a twenty yard pass to Eastburn who ran the rest of the way for another touchdown. Gooch was able to add the extra point on a drop-kick.

After this the scoring stopped. Vermont was able to complete more passes but not when they needed them. Vermont threatened to score again in the second period when Manfreda intercepted a Middlebury pass and then gained thirty yards on a pass from Gooch. This brought the ball to the 8-yard line. However, when Manfreda attempted to buck the line, he found a stonewall. Middlebury regained the ball after holding for four downs.

The third quarter was evenly fought, the ball being in midfield most of the time. Payne, Vermont's speedy colored half-back got away for a 40-yard run that looked good for a touchdown but Whitney was able to catch him on the 30-yard line. Vermont lost three yards and then was penalized fifteen for holding. Quackenbush intercepted a long pass and the danger was over.

Norwich Cadets To Clash With Blue Saturday

Marsh is out with broken ribs. Gerrish is disabled with a broken collar bone. Worcester had a bone in his hand broken in the Connecticut game. Kelley, W., who subbed for Worcester in the Clarkson game, is out with a sprained ankle. Ashton is suffering from internal injuries. However, if the injuries of Worcester, Ashton, Bradley and Kelley are not too serious, they may be available in last resort Saturday.

In all probability, Griffis will substitute for Marsh. Who will take the places of the others on the sick list is yet a question.

Lobo and Whitney made some nice gains in this period.

Lobo Takes 20-yard Pass

Vermont tried to score via the drop-kick route in the last quarter but the kick was no good. Middlebury rooters took hope immediately after this when Whitney shot a twenty-yard pass to Lobo, the only Middlebury pass completed during the game. Lobo made another good gain and Bennett made it first down on a pretty trick play. Whitney was forced to kick from here however. When the punt was returned Quackenbush ran it back eighteen yards. Again Lobo rushed through for a first down but Middlebury's hopes faded when a Vermont man intercepted a pass and ran it back 25 yards. Whitney retaliated by intercepting a pass on his own twelve-yard line but on the next play his punt was blocked and then a penalty gave the ball to Vermont on the five-yard line. Again Middlebury held Vermont for downs. Klevenow made three yards and the game was over.

The Middlebury stands easily outcheered their opponents and supported their team till the last play was over. They realized their team was giving everything they had tho in a fruitless attempt to win.

in the Fields of Physical Education."

Mr. Ralph Barstow of New York, formerly salesman for the Greenfield Tap and Die Company, now secretary for Marquis Regan Inc., Counsel on Marketing, will speak on "Salesmanship."

Arrangements for dates with leaders in several other fields are being made and a more definite announcement will be given later concerning them.

FRESHMEN TO MEET VERMONT SATURDAY

As a preliminary contest to the Middlebury-Norwich game on Saturday, the Middlebury Freshman eleven will meet the Vermont first year team on Porter Field at 12.30 p. m.

By comparative scores the teams should be fairly well matched for both have lost to Goddard Seminary, Middlebury losing 10-0 and Vermont 21-0. However the Green and Gold cubs have defeated the Norwich Freshmen 7-0 while last Saturday Norwich won over the Blue 14 to 13.

Both Payne, Vermonts Negro back, and Manfreda who played against Middlebury last Monday are freshmen at Vermont and will probably be in the line-up Saturday as Vermont has no game scheduled. Since U. V. M. has no one-year ruling they are eligible to participate.

TheMiddlebury line-up will be substantially the same as last week. Huntington has an injured finger and Dickerman sustained an injury to his knee, but they may be able to get into the game.
